Celebrio

Celebrio is software simulating an operating-system interface built on the belief that each of its parts should be clearly rendered with the same appearance and control. You can concentrate only on what you want to do and not have to figure out how to do it.

You do not have to learn English; Celebrio will always talk to you only in your native language. You do not have to know where to find news on the internet; Celebrio will find it for you. You do not have to remember or set up anything that is not needed.

You will always have something to read. Thanks to current news, you will always know what's going on and you will receive twenty shelves of free e-books, from Čapek to Shakespeare. If you want your family and friends to always be with you, you can have them with you at all times in Celebrio, which connects you with those who depend on you and thus they will always be in touch.

An active and social life full of entertainment and communication can be led at every moment. Celebrio's goal is make the world of modern technology accessible to everyone who until now has been put off by object problems and excessive complexity.

Celebrio Software, s.r.o. is an original Czech firm established by students at Masaryk University in Brno and has already won first place in the Vodafone Idea of the Year 2011 competition and the title of Ekonom Student Entrepreneur 2011, and placed in the Top 18 competitors from 183 registered countries in the Microsoft Imagine Cup 2011 final in New York.
